Many observers believe that a strong undercurrent—a struggle for national advantages in the future development of Russia's resources—was materially affecting the present negotiations. The fear that England and Germany might obtain superior rights in the practical operation of Russia's nationalization system had undoubtedly, it was considered, influenced the position of Belgium and France.

Washington, D. C., May 6.

Secretary Hughes sent to the Senate to-day a long statement by Boris Bakhmeteff, Russian Ambassador, denying in detail the charges made a few days ago by Senator Borah (Idaho) that a part of the $187,729,750 advanced by the United States to the Provisional Government of Russia at the outset of the war went into the personal account of the diplomat, even to the extent of the purchase of real estate.

Supposar that I am responsible for him in this country; that I sympathize with his activities and plans, and that in some way or other I am associated with him assistance. Such statements are gratuitious. The State Department knows I have had no connection with Gen. Semenoff and am not associated with him in any way.

"As a matter of fact I knew nothing of his intended visit to this country. I knew and know nothing of Semenoff's pfans. It is true that Semenoff called on me. Practically every Russian, other than those who favor the restoration of the old regime or are in sympathy with the Bolshevists, call at the embassy when they visit Washington. I communicated to the Department of State the circumstances under which I received Semenoff and of the valuable information I obtained from him with respect to conditions in the Far East.

The charges, which included the declaration that Mr. Bakhmeteff was responsible for the presence of Gen. Semenoff in the United States, the Russian diplomat branded as groundless, The funds left over after the collapse of the Russian Government, Mr. Bakhmeteff declared, were administered under the supervision of the State Department and the Treasury Department of the United States.

Secretary Hughes sent the Bakhmeteff statement to the Senate without comment. He addressed it to Vice-President Coolidge and the letter was read in the Senate.

"In the course of the discussion the question was raised of my willingness to state facts. As I have on many occasions indicated to the Department, I among to glad to give all possible information relating to my activities which the Department might ask for. I have nothing to conceal. Moreover, in so far as the use of funds is concerned a most detailed and fully accounting is on file with the Treasury Department."

When the letter had been read Senator Borah took the floor.

"It does appear now undoubtedly that Bakhmetieff received $187,000,000." he said. "That is plain and quite understandable. I have examined and researched for the statement to the Senate without comment. He addressed it to Vice-President Coolidge and the letter was read in the Senate.

Senator Borah, when the letter had been read, declared the statement was in no sense an explanation of the situation. He said he still was unable to understand what had become of about $78,000,000 of the money left in Mr.

know that he was even going to visit this country, knows nothing about his plans, and so forth. It does appear, however, that Semenoff visited him and that Bakhmeteff acquired some very valuable information about conditions in the Far East; of the activities of Semenoff in the Far East; of the activities of Semenoff in the Far East; of his attack upon American soldiers; of his murder of helpless citizens; of his murder of helpless citizens; of his establishing a slaughter pen. It would be more interesting and more satisfactory and more conclusive if Mr. Bakhmeteff would appear before a committee and inform it just what the conversation was between this pseudo ambassador and this inurderer from Siberia.

"It is not satisfactory, in my judgment, to any one outside of one who is willing to surrender his convictions to the dictation of a bureau, to have a man write a letter under such circumstances and say that his association with the Mongolian monster was incidental and had no significance whatever."
